Maritime Civilizations	The International MA program in Maritime Civilizations is a unique interdisciplinary program offered by the Department of Maritime Civilizations that provides students an opportunity to explore the history, archeology and fabric of maritime societies as well as the natural environment within which they developed. It is based on the growing understanding around the world that the future of humankind relies on the health of our oceans and the societies that interact with them, not only on the welfare of life on land. The curriculum offers advanced knowledge and research training to students interested in exploring human interactions with the sea in a dynamic learning environment in which theory is combined with hands-on scientific experience in the lab and the field.	English	1 year	March, 2012	Government	Biologist, Archeologists	Includes field work
